CONTRAGATE REPORT; CONGRESS, CONTRAS, AND DRUGS

Copyright © by Dennis Bernstein, Robert Knight, and Howard Levine

Now that the Select Committee on the Iran-contra affair has finished its timid public poking into the scandal, the real investigations can begin. While attention has been focused almost exclusively on the Select Committee's feeble efforts, there are five other arenas—three congressional probes, one lawsuit, and the special prosecutor's investigation—where the real information about Oliver North's secret network of gun-runners and coke-smugglers may be dredged up. Thus, hope remains that at least one or two of the investigations will get to the gritty truth that lies just beneath North's spit-shined exterior.

On July 16, the very same day Admiral John Poindexter told the Select Committee that it was he alone who authorized the diversion of funds from the Iranian arms sales to the contras, the Subcommittee on Terrorism, Narcotics, and International Operations, under Senator John Kerry (D-Mass.), began its hearings into the connections between the CIA and contra drug smuggling.

Kerry opened the public portion of his Foreign Relations subcommittee by stating that his investigation will go beyond merely examining individual charges of contra drug smuggling to evaluate as well the "broader aspects of drug trafficking as they may or may not have come to affect and impact American foreign policy and indeed the internal policies of other countries in ways [that] affect the interests of the United States."

This broader mission is crucial because it emphasizes the profound impact that the narcotics trade has on the making and execution of U.S. foreign policy.

Testimony from people like convicted drug smugglers Jorge Morales and Ramon Milian-Rodriguez have implicated contra leaders, CIA agents, and NSC operatives in the drugs-for-guns scam. Morales told the panel that on many occasions during a 1984-1985 ban on military aid, CIA "asset" and former NSC aide Robert Owen allowed the contras to use airstrips on a Costa Rican ranch to traffic in weapons and narcotics. Morales, a one-time world champion speedboat racer, told the subcommittee that his pilots trans-shipped drugs on that ranchowner's land "many times," and that at least half a ton of contra cocaine, worth tens of millions of dollars, was shipped into the U.S. this way and sold to raise money for weapons. Morales also testified that contra leaders Adolfo (Popo) Chamorro, Gerardo Duran, Marcos Aguado, and Octavio Cesar participated in the drugs-guns operation.

Milian-Rodriguez testified that as a money launderer for a major Colombian cocaine cartel he shuffled $10 million in drug money to the contras. After the Milian-Rodriguez testimony, Kerry announced he will issue more subpoenas to uncover the increasingly exposed "working relationships" between government officials and criminal smugglers. The House Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime, chaired by Representative William Hughes (D-Ohio), also seems to be serious about carrying out its oversight mandate. Although several people close to the investigation have accused Hughes of dragging his feet, his tough investigation of Attorney General Edwin Meese's shady dealings provides a welcome contrast to the softball treatment of Meese by the Select Committee's lapdogs.

The Hughes committee is looking into allegations that Meese's Justice Department attempted to de-rail an early investigation by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a Miami U.S. Attorney into an illegal contra arms and drug network supervised by Oliver North in the White House. "There would appear to be some substance to the allegations," said Hughes during a recent press conference, "that the Justice Department either attempted to slow down or abort one of the on-going criminal investigations. We're attempting to test that as a pet allegation."

While the Crime and the Terrorism probes move cautiously forward, the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control has pulled up lame. De-

[The Founding Fathers and Mothers] meant to set up a standard maxim for free society which should be familiar to all, constantly labored for, and, even though never perfectly attained, constantly spreading and deepening its influence and augmenting the happiness and value of life to all people of all colors everywhere . . . Its authors meant it . . . as, thank God, it is now proving itself—a new stumbling block to all those who in after times might seek to turn a free people back into the hateful paths of despotism.

This fellow's at our door, again—it's MARATHON time

* * * SPECIAL * * * MARATHON PROGRAMS by Jesse Keyes

YES. It's that special time of year once again when commercial-free WBAI attempts to cajole our listenership, pleading and begging for support of the most unique radio station on the New York scene.

Beginning September 18 and continuing through October 4, WBAI's fund-raising drive will try to reach a not-so-modest goal of $250,000, while continuing to bring you the information and fine music our listeners are accustomed to.

In keeping with our tradition of two-thirds programming and one-third pitching, WBAI will offer special 'Thon programming.

Over the summer the Pacifica network brought you gavel-to-gavel coverage of the special Congressional hearings investigating the Iran-Contra affair. On that same note, WBAI will carry the confirmation hearings of Robert Bork for the Supreme Court.

As the nation celebrates two hundred years since the signing of the U.S. Constitution, a program titled "The Constitution—We the People?" will be broadcast on September 19, starting at noon.

John Stockwell—a former Central Intelligence Agency station chief and no stranger to WBAI—will also be heard during the month of September. He'll give us an insightful insider's view of the world's largest intelligence operation.

A three-part series on African-American playwright Lorraine Hansberry September 22, 24, & 25, and a special on the legendary avant-garde saxophone player Charlie "Yardbird" Parker September 29, head the Arts Department's Marathon programming

The station will also serve as a conduit for information leading up to the October 11 Lesbian and Gay Rights March on Washington. So stay tuned

Northern Ireland's critical situation will be examined on September 28; and there is a special on the rights of the unborn on the 23rd.

Of course, there will be the regular WBAI programs and producers—"Contragate," "Natural Living," "Worldview," "The Cutting Edge, "Part of the Act, "Fearful Symmetry," et al.—these regular programs and the specials both are good reasons, we think, for your support.

The September Marathon promises to be an exciting and stimulating affair. So join us during the month, help keep WBAI on the air. Be there!

e evidence to the contrary developed by his own estigators, chair Charles Rangel (D-NY) told a press ference that he had not found "any evidence that uld show that the contra leadership were involved he trafficking of drugs." Rangel had previously orted that a check by Customs of 38 individuals or npanies being investigated by the committee ealed that 24 were already on a Customs "watch" Though Rangel didn't mention which names red "hits," several contra leaders were on the list Rangel said he will be turning over everything his mmittee has gathered to Hughes' Crime committee, ich will presumably put it to better use. According Hughes, the investigation so far has raised "a ole host of issues" with regard to potential official olvement in certain aspects of gun running and co trafficking between Florida and Central l Sc America that will require a thorough inves atio f it is the Congressional investigations that mour, it is likely that the outside probes will be the most fruitful. Somewhere off Capitol Hill, Special Prosecutor Lawrence Walsh has been quietly conducting his investigation of the events and has already brought two indictments for illegal fund-raising. Hampered by the Select Committee's rush to grant key players immunity, Walsh nevertheless is expected to throw some cold water on Olliemania by indicting North and other administration officials for various crimes and misdemeanors.

The most exciting glimpse into the big picture promises to be the Christic Institute's lawsuit on behalf of journalists Martha Honey and Tony Avirgan against the "Secret Team" allegedly responsible for the bombing of a press conference at La Penca, Nicaragua, that left three dead and 17 wounded. What originally began as an investigation into who was behind the bombing soon mushroomed into a full-blown investigation of an international conspiracy that reached from the dank basement offices of worldwide arms merchants and "former" CIA agents right into the White House. Attorney Daniel Sheehan's affidavit remains the most comprehensive presentation of the global network—at the trial later this year, Sheehan will try to indict the U.S. Government for conspiring to murder.

Since Sheehan's case depends on proving the existence of a Secret Team with global and White House ties, Sheehan will be pulling out all the stops to make his case—and nobody speaks more persuasively about the conspiracy than the feisty Irish lawyer. With subpoenas out for more than 200 people, this trial should give the broadest perspective into how foreign policy can be corrupted by the lure of quick fixes, Rambo teams, and the murky world of international narcotics peopled by manipulating mercenaries.

If nothing else, by the end of these five investigations we will know how much the Select Committee chose to ignore in its rush to exonerate.

Listen to Dennis Bernstein, Robert Knight, Connie Bhtt, and the rest of the WBAI Contragate Team weekday mornings at 8:00—and stay tuned for "Overt Action" Fridays from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m.

PUBLIC LIBRARIES AND THE FIRST AMENDMENT. The American Library Association receives three to five reports every day of requests to remove books from local public libraries. School libraries and curricula are similarly affected. Who should control the selection of library materials—librarians or the local communities they serve? Public libraries didn't exist when the Bill of Rights was ratified, yet the First Amendment guarantees freedom of expression and access to that expression. Part XII, Bicentennial Edition, Bill of Rights Radio Education Project.

HIGHLIGHT!

Saturday October 3, 7:30 p.m.

Charlie King is the founder of the People's Music Network for Songs of Freedom and Struggle. He is also a highly acclaimed solo performer, with a big following in North America. Here we feature an interview, plus a performance taped at WBAI's studio, with Charlie King. Produced by Stuart Hutchinson and Giselle Mills.

THE U.S. CONSTITUTION "We the People?"

This month marks the 200th anniversary of the Constitution of the United States of America—that document that "knits the fabric of the nation together." It's a document that is cherished and extolled by many, and scorned and vilified by others; and yet, it is a document to which we must all submit.

On Saturday, September 19, beginning at noon, WBAI-FM in conjunction with the Center for Constitutional Rights will host a public reading of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights—followed by a panel discussion on "The Future of the U.S. Constitution"—at the Martin Luther King Center, 310 West 43rd Street (between Eighth and Ninth Avenues) in New York City.

The reading will be by a number of prominent screen and stage actors and New York journalists. The panel will be lawyers, legislators, civil libertarians, and community organizers.

Following the public forum, programming will continue from WBAI's studios, where we'll feature debates and analyses of selected Articles from the Constitution. Listeners' telephone participation will be encouraged.

Among the guests expected to participate are: former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark; attorneys William Kunstler, Colin Moore, and William Schapp; judges Bruce Wright and William Booth; and Brooklyn's District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman.

Also participating will be Bill Means of the American Indian Treaty Council; Puerto Rican attorney Raphael Anglada; and journalist Gil Noble. Among others invited to make contributions are actors James Earl Jones and Linda Lavin, and journalists Seymour Hersch, Jack Newfield, and I.F. Stone.

Produced for WBAI by Samari Marksman.

HIGHLIGHTS!

Every weekday at 1:00 p.m. from September 18 on Rebroadcast: Saturday October 3 10:30 a.m. - 7:00 p.m.

The document at the base of our laws, the Constitution—and particularly the ten Amendments known as the Bill of Rights—can fairly be said to be much spoken of and little known. And poll after poll has shown that Americans not only don't know what the Amendments say, but—worse—presented with the language of the Bill of Rights, Americans judge them "Communist."

Paradoxically, the American people still support the ideas in the Constitution and the Bill of Rights—sometimes.

And what if they didn't? Would life be worse?

Tune in at 1:00 p.m., every weekday beginning Friday September 18. And tune in at 10 p.m. Monday September 21 for ACLU discussion. Saturday October 3 rebroadcast of the Bill of Rights programs—get well-versed in the basic protections against overwhelming government power.
